

CONTRIBUTORS

CHARLES D. CARY is a specialist in the field of comparative politics with emphasis on the Soviet Union. He holds a Ph.D. from Stanford University and has taught there and at the University of Iowa. As a recipient of Foreign Area and International Research and Exchanges Board fellowships, Dr. Cary has spent more than a year in the Soviet Union. He has published chapters in Jan F. Triska (ed.), Communist Party-States (1969), and Gary K. Bertsch and Thomas W. Ganschow (eds.), Comparative Communism: The Soviet, Chinese, and Yugoslav Models (1976), and numerous articles in such scholarly journals as American Political Science Review, Social Science Quarterly, Youth and Society, and Comparative Education Review. Most of his publications deal with the political socialization of Soviet youth. Dr. Cary is currently doing research involving computer content analysis of transliterated Russian language textual materials.

JOSEPH R. FISZMAN is Professor of Political Science at the University of Oregon. Educated in Poland, Lithuania, China, and the United States, he has done postdoctoral work at Charles University (Prague), Belgrade University, and the London School of Economics. Under a grant from the Office of Education (HEW), he has conducted field research on socialization in Poland, Yugoslavia, and the United States. In addition to numerous journal articles, chapters in anthologies, and book reviews, Professor Fiszman has published Revolution and Tradition in People's Poland: Education and Socialization (1972) and Education and Sociopolitical, Cultural and Economic Change (Ljubljana, 1970).

JOHN GEORGEOFF is Professor of Education and Chairman, Foundations of Education Section, Purdue University, Lafayette Campus. He received his doctorate from George Peabody College for Teachers, where he studied comparative and international education. He has traveled widely in Eastern Europe under various grants and programs. He is a co-founder of Slavic and European Education Review and a member of its editorial board. The author of eight books and monographs and over fifty articles and chapters in books, Professor Georgeoff's most recent publication (1977) is Bulgaria in the Comparative Education Series of the U.S. Office of Education.

PAUL H. B. GODWIN is Associate Professor of Asian Studies at the Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, where he teaches Chinese military doctrine and strategy. Prior to this appointment, he taught at Florida State University and at Washington University, St. Louis, and served as an analyst for the Central Intelligence Agency. He is co-author of The Making of a Model Citizen in Communist China (1971) and author of "Civil-Military Relations in Communist China" in Dale Herspring and Ivan Volgyes (eds.), Civil-Military Relations in Communist Systems (forthcoming), and has published articles in Small Group Behavior, Comparative Politics, Studies in Comparative Communism, and the Air University Review. Dr. Godwin is currently doing research on the modernization of the Chinese People's Liberation Army.

IVAN VOLGYES is Professor of Political Science at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln. A native of Budapest, he is the author or editor of nine books and numerous articles in such journals as Armed Forces and Society, the Journal of Political and Military Sociology, East European Quarterly, Problems of Communism, and Cahiers du monde Russe et Sovietique. His latest works are Politics in Hungary (with Peter A. Toma, 1976) and Civil-Military Relations in Communist Systems (co-edited with Dale Herspring, forthcoming). Material for the article in this issue was collected in Hungary during the academic year 1974-1975 when Professor Volgyes was an IREX Fellow in Eastern Europe. At present, he is serving as Chairman of the Education Committee of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies and is developing interdisciplinary multi-media materials on Eastern Europe.

STEPHEN WHITE is Lecturer in Politics and Member of the Institute of Soviet and East European Studies at the University of Glasgow. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and the University of Glasgow. He has made several trips to the Soviet Union: as a British Council exchange scholar at Moscow State University (1970-1971), on faculty exchange at the University of Leningrad (1975), and again in Leningrad (March 1977), where he completed research for his article in this issue. Dr. White is the author of The USSR: Portrait of a Super-Power and a study of British-Soviet relations in the early 1920s (both forthcoming); he has published articles in such journals as Soviet Studies, Slavic Review, Government and Opposition, Newsletter on Comparative Studies of Communism, Journal of Contemporary History, and British Journal of Political Science. He is currently working on a book-length study of political culture and Soviet politics.

MARTIN KING WHYTE is Associate Professor of Sociology and Associate of the Center for Chinese Studies at the University of Michigan. He holds an M.A. degree in Russian Area Studies and a Ph.D. in sociology from Harvard. He has travelled in the Soviet Union and China, in addition to several sojourns in Hong Kong, where he interviewed mainland refugees and served as Director of the Universities Service Centre. Professor Whyte is the author of Small Groups and Political Rituals in China (1974) and a forthcoming study (in collaboration with William Parish) entitled Village and Family in Contemporary China, as well as articles in such journals as American Sociological Review, Comparative Education Review, China Quarterly, Asian Survey, Problems of Communism, and Current Scene. He is currently working on urban neighborhood and family life in contemporary China.