

CURRENT HISTORY

September 2008

Vol. 107, No. 710

CONTENTS

- 243 Forced Harmony: China's Olympic Rollercoaster Dali L. Yang
While trying to manage economic growing pains, Tibetan protests, a catastrophic earthquake, and the Olympic Games, China's leadership finds itself caught between the demands of populism and internationalism.
- 250 Japan's New Politics: Quiet Before the Storm? Steven Vogel
If the opposition Democratic Party of Japan wins the next election, as now seems likely, Japan could see its first lasting alternation in power since 1955.
- 256 South Korea's Not-So-Sharp Right Turn David C. Kang
Lee Myung Bak's rise to the presidency this year has been heralded as a return to conservatism. But domestic opinion and regional trends sharply limit his room for maneuver.
- 263 Beyond Demonization: A New Strategy for Human Rights in North Korea Katharine H. S. Moon
The continuing popularity of hectoring notwithstanding, persistent engagement with Pyongyang offers the best hope for actually reducing human rights abuses in the North.
- 269 Does China Face a "Lost Decade?" Richard Katz
To anyone acquainted with Japan's bubble of the 1980s, today's economic imbalances in China seem alarmingly familiar.
- 276 Taiwan's Liberation of China Randall Schriver and Mark Stokes
Taiwan has played, and continues to play, an important but often unacknowledged role in the mainland's peaceful transformation.
- 282 Beijing Eyes a Bear Market Lyric Hughes Hale
China's sagging stock markets may suggest that a critical developmental limit has been reached, and that further market reforms are now urgently necessary.
- 287 The Party-State Studies Abroad David Shambaugh
The Chinese Communist Party's plans for staying in power are guided by careful study of how other regimes have retained or lost legitimacy.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 293 China's Next Revolution Elizabeth Economy
Only environmental changes of a magnitude equal to Deng Xiaoping's sweeping economic reforms can rescue the People's Republic from disaster.
- BOOKS
- 295 The Making of Modern East Asia William Anthony Hay
Two new books detail how World War II and its aftermath forged the Pacific region's geopolitical relationships, which China's rise threatens now to overturn.
- FOUR MONTHS IN REVIEW
- 299 April—July 2008
An international chronology of events, country by country, day by day, from April through July.