CONTENTS

- 51 No Longer Washington's Backyard Michael Shifter and Daniel Joyce
What if Brazil held a summit and the Americans weren't invited? It just happened—another sign that a transformed region wants more political independence from the United States.
- 58 An Economic Storm Hits Latin America Sidney Weintraub
Despite efforts by Latin American countries to insulate themselves from global volatility, the world-wide slump has brought the region's five-year growth surge to an end.
- 65 Hemispheric Security: A New Approach John A. Cope and Frank O. Mora
Traditional security policies are ill suited for dealing with the threats that arise from transnational criminal networks, youth gangs, and drug cartels.
- 72 Mexico's Drug Wars Get Brutal Francisco E. González
A military offensive against drug traffickers has yielded a violent reaction and revealed evidence of drug-related corruption at all levels of the government.
- 77 For Chávez, Still More Discontent Javier Corrales
As oil revenues decline, Venezuela's populist president finds himself increasingly besieged by street protests, electoral setbacks, and economic woes.
- 83 Indigenous Movements Lose Momentum Donna Lee Van Cott
Political parties representing the region's indigenous peoples face a backlash and, in some countries, are struggling to maintain their popular appeal.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 90 A Way Forward for Hemispheric Trade Eric Farnsworth
The existing model for expanding trade in the hemisphere—in essence, piecemeal liberalization—has reached a point of diminishing returns.
- BOOKS
- 93 Has the Cuban Moment Arrived? William W. Finan Jr.
An ailing Fidel Castro has quit. Cuban-Americans' views have softened. The author of a new book suggests the time has come to end America's isolation of the island.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 95 December 2008
An international chronology of events in December, country by country, day by day.
