CONTENTS

- 339 Letter from Damascus:
Will Syria Descend into Civil War? Sami Moubayed
When the Arab Spring erupted nearly a year ago, neither Bashar al-Assad's regime nor most Syrians believed the unrest would spread to their country. They were wrong.
- 345 The Palestinians' Receding Dream of Statehood Nathan J. Brown
Palestinians' recent effort to upgrade their United Nations status has not slowed a steady, ongoing erosion of statehood as a focus of their aspirations.
- 352 Uprisings Jolt the Saudi-Iranian Rivalry Frederic Wehrey
The Saudis and Iranians, long-standing rivals for influence in the region, confront a strategic landscape transformed by forces largely beyond their control.
- 358 Islamism After the Arab Spring Ashraf El Sherif
North African Islamists, among them an increasing number of democratic reformists, are experimenting with new approaches to politics that embrace pragmatism and pluralism.
- 364 The Middle East in Flux. Michael C. Hudson
Almost every nation in the region is wrestling with existential identity issues, and the contagion effect from this year's uprisings suggests a heightened sense of pan-Arab community. Third in a series on regionalism around the world.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 370 Libya's Revolution: Do Institutions Matter? Michele Dunne
Libyans' path toward democracy looks rocky, to be sure. But at least they have been spared the cynical, instrumental use of democratic institutions that Egyptians and Tunisians for decades endured.
- BOOKS
- 372 The Muslim World's Counter-Jihad William W. Finan Jr.
A new book finds the sources of Arab unrest not only in fury at corrupt regimes and stagnant economies, but also in a popular culture that scorns Islamist extremism.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 373 October 2011
An international chronology of events in October, country by country, day by day.
- 375 2011 Current History Index
