CONTENTS

- 291 The Responsibility to Protect: Dilemmas of a New Norm ..... Jennifer Welsh
The humanitarian rationale for the use of force now occasionally trumps national sovereignty. Still, support for the “responsibility to protect” remains narrow and fragile.
- 299 Prudence Suggests Staying Out of Syria ..... David W. Lesch
Although the Assad regime’s slaughter of civilians continues, international intervention, besides further militarizing and dividing Syrian society, could compound the mayhem.
- 305 Libya and the Limits of Intervention ..... Stephen Kinzer
Mali’s plunge into instability following the NATO operation in Libya offers another reminder that deployments of military force always produce unforeseen consequences.
- 310 Beijing and Moscow Balk at “Interference” ..... Rajan Menon
Pointing to Libya and Syria, Chinese and Russian leaders contend that the goal of regime change all too often underlies interventions to protect civilians.
- 317 African Conflicts, Western Activism ..... Jason K. Stearns
When it comes to humanitarian missions in Africa, activists craft simplistic narratives of good vs. evil, and skeptics confuse Westerners’ double standards with sinister intent.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 322 On R2P, America Takes the Lead ..... Thomas G. Weiss
“Never again” is not a reality. But as the Obama administration showed in Libya, US leadership can make prevention of mass atrocities a plausible proposition.
- BOOKS
- 325 Fighting Wars for Human Rights ..... William W. Finan Jr.
A new book recounts the history of the international human rights movement, a movement that of late has become in part an instrument of war.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 327 September 2012
An international chronology of events in September, country by country, day by day.
