CONTENTS

- 211 Citizen Contention and Campus Calm:
The Paradox of Chinese Civil Society . . . . . Elizabeth J. Perry
In the 25 years since the Tiananmen uprising, China has seen a huge increase in social activism and protest, yet students have mounted no new challenge to the party-state's legitimacy.
- 218 History's Unfinished Business in East Asia . . . . . Rana Mitter
As conflicting national interpretations of World War II continue to cause frictions, China hopes to use historical claims to revise the regional order. First in a series on resurgent nationalism around the world.
- 224 How Real Are Myanmar's Reforms? . . . . . Christina Fink
Myanmar began a new era of political and economic openings in 2011, shedding its pariah status—but the military still wields power behind the curtains.
- 231 The Roots of China's Ethnic Conflicts . . . . . Yan Sun
In Xinjiang and Tibet, a policy mix of heavy sticks and large carrots has failed to pacify ethnic and religious minorities seeking greater autonomy from Beijing.
- 238 Mongolia Searches for Breathing Room . . . . . Li Narangoa
Long squeezed uncomfortably between its enormous Russian and Chinese neighbors, Mongolia is seeking independence by means of new alliances and its mineral resources.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 245 China's Bullying No Match for US Pacific Power . . . . . Bruce Cumings
Beijing's grabs for puny islands have alarmed and alienated smaller countries in the region. But Washington doesn't need to "pivot" to Asia—it's been in charge there for decades.
- BOOKS
- 252 Forbidden Memories of 1989 . . . . . Kate Merkel-Hess
New books by Evan Osnos and Louisa Lim show the profound dissonance between official amnesia and personal recollections of the Tiananmen tragedy.
- FOUR MONTHS IN REVIEW
- 254 April–July 2014
An international chronology of events from April through July, country by country, day by day.
