

CURRENT HISTORY

April 2015

Vol. 114, No. 771

CONTENTS

- 123 Can Modi Deliver a New India? Siddharth Varadarajan
Narendra Modi has set out to transform his country, but contradictions between his aims of inclusive economic development and Hindu ascendancy could derail his juggernaut.
- 130 War-Wearied Pakistan's Internal Divides Humeira Iqtidar
Pakistani generals have profited from participating in Washington's war on terror while manipulating Islamist militants, but violence and political conflict are now intensifying on the home front.
- 137 The Other Drawdown in Afghanistan C. Christine Fair
While the departure of foreign troops has prompted much hand-wringing about a Taliban comeback, the bigger problem is dwindling international funding for a precarious government in Kabul.
- 144 Bangladesh and the Global Climate Debate Masroora Haque and Saleemul Huq
Battered by cyclones, Bangladesh is in the vanguard of a campaign to ensure that international climate change agreements guarantee compensation to poor nations for loss and damage.
- 149 South Asia in Dark Times: Homogenizing Nation-States and the Problem of Minorities Vazira Zamindar
The predicaments of minorities in contemporary India and Pakistan can be traced back 75 years to flawed visions for the subcontinent's partition. Seventh in a series on resurgent nationalism around the world.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 154 Citizenship Reborn in Sri Lanka Nira Wickramasinghe
The unexpected ouster of an authoritarian president in January's election was the result of a slow-burning citizens' uprising. Will this revival of civil society lead to lasting progress?
- BOOKS
- 157 Freedom and Faith in India Neeti Nair
A new volume of essays edited by Wendy Doniger and Martha C. Nussbaum examines the Hindu right's influence throughout Indian society—a trend perhaps abetted by liberal taboos.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 160 February 2015
An international chronology of events in February, country by country, day by day.