

CURRENT HISTORY

February 2018

Vol. 117, No. 796

CONTENTS

- 43 How NAFTA Has Changed Mexico Kathleen Staudt
In the quarter-century since the North American trade deal took effect, many US manufacturers have outsourced production to Mexico, but the shift has not benefited most ordinary Mexicans.
- 49 Ecuador's Unexpected Transition Catherine M. Conaghan
Lenín Moreno was supposed to be a placeholder president until his predecessor, Rafael Correa, could return. Instead, Moreno is challenging the authoritarian legacy that he inherited.
- 56 Peru's Struggle with the Fujimori Legacy Stephanie McNulty
The intrigue surrounding Alberto Fujimori's recent pardon is another sign of the lasting damage that the former strongman inflicted on the nation's democratic institutions.
- 62 Adapting to Climate Hazards
in the Peruvian Andes Mark Carey and Holly Moulton
Climate change has been unfolding for decades in the Andes, where melting glaciers can cause deadly floods. Peru's experience shows that local-level social and political contexts are key to adaptation. Fifth in a series on climate adaptation around the world.
- 69 Race and Rising Inequality in Cuba Katrin Hansing
Fidel Castro's revolution sought to banish inequality. Yet it forestalled a reckoning with the racist legacy of colonialism that is now resurfacing amid economic changes.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 73 The Pyrrhic Victories of Venezuela's President Alejandro Velasco
Despite a collapsing economy, Nicolás Maduro's authoritarian moves to neutralize his opponents seemed to be succeeding—until year-end protests showed the working class was finally fed up.
- BOOKS
- 77 Visions and Reality of a Common Culture José C. Moya
The idea of Latin America has shifted over time, from bulwark against Yankee imperialism to unique ethnic and cultural mix. But it has always framed the region as an antimodern foil to the West.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 80 December 2017
An international chronology of events in December, country by country, day by day.