

CURRENT HISTORY

November 2019

Vol. 118, No. 811

CONTENTS

- 291 The Swinging Pendulum of Police Reform in the Americas Yanilda María González
The failure of previous attempts to overhaul abusive and poorly performing police departments in South America offers lessons for current reform efforts in the United States.
- 298 How Inmates Help Run Philippine Prisons Clarke Jones and Raymund Narag
Severely overcrowded and under-resourced, prisons in the Philippines are kept from collapse by informal cooperative arrangements between inmate organizations and prison officials.
- 304 Decriminalization and the Dilemmas of Regulating Prostitution Susan Dewey
Although still rarely adopted as a formal policy, decriminalization is a de facto part of the enforcement mix in many countries, and the preferred option of most sex workers.
- 310 US Immigration Law Enforcement in the ICE Era Tanya Golash-Boza
The post-9/11 domestic security reorganization in the United States created a new agency whose collaboration with police has struck fear into immigrant communities—and not just under Trump.
- 316 The Death Penalty's Continued Decline David T. Johnson and Franklin E. Zimring
More countries than ever have ended capital punishment, while a handful in the Middle East and Asia still make heavy, if diminished, use of the ultimate sanction.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 322 Lessons on the Drug War from an Enemy Maziyar Ghiabi
Iran has largely abandoned its hard-line policies and now treats drug abuse as a public health problem. Why is it so hard for other nations to renounce their costly embrace of prohibition?
- BOOKS
- 325 Time to Rein in the Prosecutors? Lisa L. Miller
An expert makes a detailed case for criminal justice reform, yet offers few answers for the kind of violent crime wave that led to the era of mass incarceration—and ravages minority communities.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 328 September 2019
An international chronology of events in September, country by country, day by day.