CONTENTS

- 83 The Pandemic Worsens Europe's Housing Problems . . . . . Lindsay B. Flynn
Inequality and government policies are at the root of a housing affordability crisis that was decades in the making, and now extends across the continent and deep into the middle class.
- 90 Disability Rights and Cross-National Disparities in Europe . . . . . Aude Lejeune
Despite stronger protections against discrimination, living conditions and labor rights for people with disabilities vary among EU member states. Seventh in a series on disability rights around the world.
- 96 The Ambiguities of Assisted Suicide in Switzerland . . . . . Alexandre Pillonel
Associations advocating for the right to die with dignity have pushed the boundaries in the face of a refusal by the state and medical establishment to take steps to institutionalize the practice.
- 102 The Evolving Terrorism Threat in Europe . . . . . Raffaello Pantucci
The threat of mass casualty events may have faded, but small-scale attacks by lone assailants with a wider array of sometimes incoherent grievances are a growing menace and harder to stop.
- 108 REN PILL Politics in Poland . . . . . David Ost
Whatever it is called, the brand of right-wing populism entrenched in Poland and other European nations shares many of the most toxic political and ideological features of historical fascism.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 114 The Mobile Fortress . . . . . Holly Case
Viktor Orbán's crusade to remake Hungary has led to a contradictory immigration policy that echoes traumatic episodes in the country's past.
- BOOKS
- 117 Being Muslim in Modern Yugoslavia . . . . . Marc David Baer
A book that aims to restore Islam to its rightful place in European history traces how Ottoman legacies shaped the turbulent multireligious trajectory of the Balkans.
