Coming Next Month . . .

In March, we shall publish our fourth coordinated study on LATIN AMERICA, this time on FOREIGN POLICIES IN LATIN AMERICA. The issue traces the contributions made by foreign powers to the historical development of Latin America and the history of Inter-Americanism.

As some of our contributors point out:

"Only one who knows Brazil can appreciate the important lesson that Portugal taught America in the matter of racial relations." J. J. Johnson, Associate Professor of History, Stanford University.

"French thought provided the ideological structure and emotional impetus for Latin American independence and continues to stimulate the development of a native Latin American culture." Lee Ellerich, CURRENT HISTORY staff.

"The economic development of Latin America is the work in major degree of European and American capital and business ability." Richard W. Van Alstyne, Professor of History, University of Southern California.

"Latin America has served as a laboratory and proving ground for general American foreign policy." Arthur P. Whitaker, Professor of History, University of Pennsylvania.

"The inter-American movement has provided the world with a revealing and important case study in international development." Howard F. Cline, Director of The Hispanic Foundation, Library of Congress.

All four coordinated issues on LATIN AMERICA are available for class or study use at special bulk rates. For further information about these issues, write to the publication office.
