REPRESENTATIONS gratefully acknowledges generous support from the Czesław Miłosz Fund for Distinguished Faculty in the Humanities, a gift of Reita and James R. Bell, and from the Doreen B. Townsend Center for the Humanities.

Contributors to this issue:

MARY NYQUIST teaches in the Department of English, the Literary Studies Program, and the Institute of Women's Studies and Gender Studies at the University of Toronto. In addition to studies of Milton and other early modern writers, she has published on Locke, Anglo-American women novelists, mass-produced romance, and modern poetry. She is currently completing a book on early modern political theory, literature, and colonial slavery.

GEOFFREY GALT HARPHAM is Director of the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina. His most recent books are Language Alone: The Critical Fetish of Modernity (2002) and The Character of Criticism (2006).

STEPHEN GREENBLATT is Cogan University Professor of the Humanities at Harvard University. He is currently at work on a study of the loss and recovery of Lucretius's On the Nature of Things.

RICHARD HALPERN is Sir William Osler Professor of English at The Johns Hopkins University. He is the author of several books on Shakespeare and other topics.

VICTORIA KAHN is Professor of English and Comparative Literature at UC Berkeley. She is the author, most recently, of Wayward Contracts: The Crisis of Political Obligation in England, 1640–1674 (Princeton, 2004).

BERNHARD JUSSEN is Professor of Medieval History at Frankfurt University. His research focuses on premodern kinship systems, political language in the middle ages, and collective pictorial memories in modern Europe. His works in English include Spiritual Kinship as Social Practice and Signal: Christian Boltanski, as well as the edited volumes Ordering Medieval Society: Perspectives on Intellectual and Practical Modes of Shaping Social Relations and Negotiating the Gift: Pre-modern Figurations of Exchange.

LORNA HUTSON is Berry Professor and Head of the School of English at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland. Her most recent book is The Invention of Suspicion: Law and Mimesis in Shakespeare and Renaissance Drama (Oxford, 2007).
