Contributors to this issue:

MICHAEL CLUNE is an Assistant Professor of English at the University of South Florida. His first book, American Literature and the Free Market, 1945–2000, is forthcoming from Cambridge University Press.

JOCHEN HELLBECK is Associate Professor of History at Rutgers University. He is the author of Revolution on My Mind: Writing a Diary Under Stalin (Harvard University Press, 2006). He is currently working on a comparative study of the German and Soviet experiences of the Battle of Stalingrad.

JORDAN SAND is Associate Professor of Japanese history and culture at Georgetown University. He is the author of House and Home in Modern Japan: Architecture, Domestic Space, and Bourgeois Culture, 1880–1930 (Harvard University Press, 2004).

SARAH WINTER is Associate Professor of English at the University of Connecticut, Storrs. Her publications in interdisciplinary nineteenth-century studies include Freud and the Institution of Psychoanalytic Knowledge (Stanford, 1999) and The Pleasures of Memory: Learning to Read with Charles Dickens (Fordham, forthcoming 2010).