Contributors to this issue:

CHRISTOPHER PYE is a Professor in the English Department at Williams College. He is the author of The Regal Phantasm: Shakespeare and the Politics of Spectacle and The Vanishing: Shakespeare, the Subject, and Early Modern Culture and is currently completing a book on early modern political aesthetics.

ALISON HURLEY is Assistant Professor of English at Miami University of Ohio. She is currently finishing a book that links the histories of the provincial English watering place, the eighteenth-century novel, and the British nation.

DOROTHEA VON MÜCKE teaches German and Comparative Literature at Columbia University. She is currently working on a manuscript entitled Authorship, Authority, and the Order of Nature: Enlightenment Models of Creativity, Subjectivity, and a Critical Public.

ANDREAS MAYER has worked and published widely on the history of the human sciences, most notably on psychoanalysis and its related discourses and practices. Since 2007 he has been a research scholar at the Max Planck Institute for the History of Science (Berlin) and is currently completing a book on the scientific study of movement in the nineteenth century.

KRISS RAVETTO-BIAGIOLI is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Edinburgh in Film Studies. She is the author of The Unmaking of Fascist Aesthetics and has published articles on digital and performance art, modernism, feminism, nationalism, representations of violence, and postsocialist cinema.