Contributors to this issue:

COLLEEN LYE is Associate Professor of English at the University of California, Berkeley. She is the author of America's Asia: Racial Form and American Literatures, 1893–1945 (Princeton, 2005) and coeditor, with Christopher Newfield, of “Against the Day: the Struggle for Public Education in California,” a special section of South Atlantic Quarterly 110, no. 2 (Spring 2011).

CHRISTOPHER NEWFIELD teaches American Studies in the English Department at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and is most recently the author of Unmaking the Public University: The Forty Year Assault on the Middle Class (Harvard University Press). He chairs the Innovation Group at the NSF Center for Nanotechnology in Society; runs a blog on the current crisis in higher education, Rethinking the University (<http://utotherescue.blogspot.com>); blogs at the Huffington Post; and is working on a book called Lower Education: Reversing our Downsized Future.

JAMES VERNON is a Professor of History at the University of California, Berkeley and a member of the editorial board of Representations. His most recent books are Hunger: A Modern History (Harvard University Press, 2007) and, coedited with Simon Gunn, The Peculiarities of Liberal Modernity in Imperial Britain (University of California Press, 2011).

WENDY BROWN is Class of 1936 First Professor at the University of California, Berkeley, where she teaches political theory. In addition to Berkeley's Department of Political Science, she is affiliated with its Department of Rhetoric and the interdisciplinary graduate programs in Critical Theory and Women, Gender, and Sexuality. She is the author of a number of books, most recently Walled States, Waning Sovereignty (2010).

GEOFFREY GALT HARPHAM is the Director of the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina. His work has focused on questions of ethics and aesthetics in literary study and, more recently, on the history of the humanities. His most recent books are The Character of Criticism (Routledge, 2006) and The Humanities and the Dream of America (University of Chicago Press, 2011).

SARAH AMSLER is a Lecturer in Sociology at Aston University (UK). She is author of The Politics of Knowledge in Central Asia: Science Between Marx and the Market (2007) and various essays on the politics of knowledge, culture, and education. She is currently working on two projects: one exploring the intellectual and affective politics of aesthetic and pedagogical practices and another reading critical theory into a radical politics of everyday life.

CHRISTOPHER L. CONNERY is Professor of Literature and Cultural Studies at the University of California, Santa Cruz. Currently he is Director of the University of California's Education Abroad Program in Shanghai, China. His books include The Empire of the Text: Writing and Authority in Early Imperial China, The Asian Sixties, The Sixties and the World Event, and The Worlding Project: Doing Cultural Studies in The Age of Globalization.

SUZANNE GUERLAC is Professor of Modern French Studies at UC Berkeley. She is the author of several books, including Literary Polemics: Bataille, Sartre, Valéry, and Breton (cowinner of the Scaglioni Award) and Thinking in Time: An Introduction to Henri Bergson. She is coeditor, with Pheng Cheah, of Derrida and the Time of the Political and is presently writing a book on Proust.

ROBERT MEISTER's political thought concerns the moral relations between the beneficiaries of social and political injustice and its victims. His most recent book is After Evil: A Politics of Human Rights (Columbia University Press, 2010).

RANDY MARTIN is Professor and Chair of Art and Public Policy at New York University, where he directs the graduate program in Arts Politics. His recent books include Under New Management: Universities, Administrative Labor, and the Professional Turn; An Empire of Indifference: American War and the Financial Logic of Risk Management; Financialization of Daily Life, and On Your Marx: Relinking Socialism and the Left.

ANANYA ROY is Professor of City and Regional Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. Her teaching and research are concerned with the critical examination of global circulations of capital and with urban modernities in the global South. Roy's most recent books are Poverty Capital: Microfinance and the Making of Development (2010) and Worlding Cities: Asian Experiments and the Art of Being Global, coedited with Aihwa Ong (2011).

SHANNON STEEN is Associate Professor of Theater, Dance, and Performance Studies at UC Berkeley. She is the author most recently of Racial Geometries: The Black Atlantic, Asian Pacific, and American Theatre (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010) and is coeditor of AfroAsian Encounters: Culture, History, Politics (New York University Press, 2006). Currently she is at work on a new project, ReOrientations: California and the Performance of Cultural Location.

GEORGE LAKOFF is the author of many books, including The Political Mind, Moral Politics, and, with Mark Johnson, Metaphors We Live By. He is Richard and Rhoda Goldman Distinguished Professor of Cognitive Science and Linguistics at the University of California, Berkeley.
