Contributors to this issue:

JAMES LEO CAHILL is Director of the Cinema Studies Institute and Associate Professor of Cinema and French at the University of Toronto. He is author of Zoological Surrealism: The Nonhuman Cinema of Jean Painlevé (Minnesota, 2019), co-editor with Luca Caminati of Cinema of Exploration: Essays in an Adventurous Film Practice (AFI/Routledge, 2021), and general editor of Discourse: Journal for Theoretical Studies in Media and Culture.

BRIAN R. JACOBSON is Professor of Visual Culture at the California Institute of Technology. He is the author of Studios Before the System: Architecture, Technology, and the Emergence of Cinematic Space (Columbia University Press, 2015), editor of In the Studio: Visual Creation and Its Material Environments (University of California Press, 2020), and recipient of the 2021 Society for Cinema and Media Studies Award for Best Edited Collection.

WEIHONG BAO is Associate Professor of Film and Media & East Asian Languages and Cultures, UC Berkeley. She is the author of Fiery Films: The Emergence of an Affective Medium in China, 1915–1945 (University of Minnesota Press, 2015), which received honorable mention for the Modernist Studies Association Best Book Prize in 2016. She is currently working on a new book, Background Matters: The Art of Environment in Modern China. She is the editor-in-chief for the Journal of Chinese Cinemas and co-edits the Film Theory in Media History book series published by Amsterdam University Press.

JENNIFER LYNN PETERSON is the author of Education in the School of Dreams: Travelogues and Early Nonfiction Film (Duke University Press, 2013). Her work has been published in JCMS, Feminist Media Histories, Camera Obscura, Moving Image, and numerous edited volumes. She is Professor and Chair of the Media Studies Program at Woodbury University in Los Angeles. Her book-in-progress, Cinema's Ecological Past: Film History, Nature, and Endangerment Before 1960, is under contract with Columbia University Press.

JENNIFER FAY is Professor of Film and English at Vanderbilt University, where she is also chair of the Cinema & Media Arts Department. She is the author of Theaters of Occupation: Hollywood and the Re-education of Postwar Germany (2008) and Inhospitable World: Cinema in the Time of the Anthropocene (2018), and co-author of Film Noir: Hard-Boiled Modernity and the Cultures of Globalization. In spring of 2021, Fay was a Cinemoetics Fellow at the Center for Advanced Film Studies at the Freie Universität, Berlin.

YURIKO FURUHATA is Associate Professor and William Dawson Scholar of Cinema and Media History in the Department of East Asian Studies and an associate member of the Department of Art History and Communication Studies at McGill University. She works in the areas of film and media studies, architecture, visual arts, and critical theory. Her first book, Cinema of Actuality: Japanese Avant-Garde Filmmaking in the Season of Image Politics (Duke University Press, 2013), won the Best First Book Award from the Society of Cinema and Media Studies. Her second book, Climatic Media: Transpacific Experiments in Atmospheric Control (Duke University Press, 2022), explores geopolitical connections across environmental art, weather control, digital computing, and cybernetic architecture in Japan and the United States. She is currently working on two new projects: the first, titled Into Frozen Archives, explores snow and ice as storage media in relation to the legacies of Japanese and American imperialisms; the second, titled Enchanted Consultation, examines the cultural techniques of divination and prediction in relation to histories of pseudoscience, including astrology, geomancy, and parapsychology.

KATERINA KOROLA is a Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow in the Department of Art History and the College at the University of Chicago, where she recently completed a joint PhD in Art History and Cinema & Media Studies. She is currently working on a monograph that investigates early twentieth-century attempts to picture the air through photography and film.

DEBASHREE MUKHERJEE is Associate Professor of Film and Media in the Department of Middle Eastern, South Asian, and African Studies (ME-SAAS) at Columbia University in New York. Her first academic monograph, Bombay Hustle: Making Movies in a Colonial City (Columbia University Press, 2020), approaches film history as an ecology of material practice and practitioners. In her new research she is developing a media history of indenture and South-South migrations, spanning photography, communications infrastructures, and film traffic. Mukherjee edits the peer-reviewed journal BioScope: South Asian Screen Studies and has published in journals such as Film History and Feminist Media Histories.
